1. Chef Hui x Aloha Harvest in partnership with Pacific Gateway Center

   • In Phase 1 (March 2020) of this collaboration, we focused on safely, equitably processing the temporary spike in excess food resulting from canceled events & hotel and restaurant closures.
   • In Phase 2, Chef Hui is cooking! Together, we’re providing ready-to-go meals for communities AND supporting local farmers and businesses with purchasing power secured through grants.

   Chef Hui x Aloha Harvest meals = rescued food (63.5%) + purchased ingredients (36.5%)

   • About 80% of all purchased ingredients have been locally sourced, thanks to some of the supporters included on the next page.
   • Though Aloha Harvest's primary focus is still food rescue, supporting local food producers is a gap that must be filled as our community navigates COVID-19. This will help keep the primary food supply chain as stable as possible.

   Expansion:

   In April, Chef Hui grew from cooking/storing food solely out of Pacific Gateway Center to working out of three kitchens around the island.

   19,050 lbs rescued food utilized, out of 30,000 total lbs of food Chef Hui processed

   15 local farms & businesses supported via purchases

   ~15,875 meals made possible, per USDA standard of 1.2 lbs/meal

   2,800 hours volunteered

   20 food donors

   27 recipient agencies

   Open Kitchen O‘ahu

   Waimea Valley

   1,000 lbs food processed

   650 meals created

   Kona Brewing Company

   East O‘ahu

   2,350 lbs food processed

   2,500 meals created

2. Meal delivery

   Kupu and Kapiʻolani Community College are both using their kitchen spaces to prepare free grab-and-go meals daily during COVID-19. In April, with the help of La Tour Bakehouse, Bargreen Ellingson, and Re-use Hawai‘i, we provided constant delivery service for food prepared at each site, along with logistics support as needed.

   16,742 meals delivered to:

   Ke Kula Nui O Waimānalo, KEY Project

   9,895 meals delivered to:

   KVIBE (Kōkua Kalihi Valley), Mililani YMCA, Nu‘uanu YMCA

3. Support grassroots food distributions

   We also provided delivery and logistical support for over a dozen food distribution events in April. Though we usually focus on supply and leave distribution to our awesome recipient agencies, this is another gap that we’ve stepped in to help fill during the pandemic.

Supporters Spotlight

The Clarence T.C. Ching Foundation exists to help people of Hawai‘i who are in need. Especially in times of great uncertainty and hardship, the Foundation’s grantmaking allows many social service organizations to step up to meet the growing needs of the community. Their support will allow us to upgrade our aging fleet of trucks, significantly increasing our operational capacity.

For every dollar spent at any local takeout or delivery with a First Hawaiian Bank card, $1 is donated to the Aloha for Hawai‘i campaign. As a recipient of this campaign, we will work to scale our efforts even further to feed the need of the community. We are truly grateful for the tremendous support and longstanding relationship we have with First Hawaiian Bank.

For over 30 years, The Harry and Jeanette Weinberg Foundation has supported nonprofits in Hawai‘i working to address the needs of low-income individuals. We are thankful and excited to work with the Foundation in helping our keiki, kupuna, and their ʻohana in these extremely challenging times.

Thanks to the support of The City and County of Honolulu, in April we were able to help launch the first mass food distribution on O‘ahu. At the Waipi‘o Soccer Complex, over 1,000 “Stew in a Bag” kits and other food items were given to community members. With over 14,000 pounds of local meat, produce, eggs, rice, and other goodies, this was enough to create nearly 12,000 meals.
