Featured Partners

Food Donor
Sodexo, The Queen’s Medical Center

Starting in September 2021, we have partnered with food service company, Sodexo, at The Queen’s Medical Center in Honolulu for ongoing weekly pickups. We are happy to be working with Chef James Shirley who manages the Sodexo kitchen at the hospital.

“What stood out to me about Aloha Harvest was the way they consider quality and presentation when distributing their food — they respect and see those who they deliver to as just as deserving as others.”

Chef James Shirley, Sodexo

Food Donor
Hawaiian Isles Water Company

Hawaiian Isles Water Company reached out to us after pallets of their water bottles were rejected or returned by their buyers due to minor factors like loose and incomplete pallets.

They decided to donate all the water and reached out to us, trusting that we would help get that water redistributed quickly to those communities in need.

In our first week, we picked up 32,300 lbs. of water and delivered it to 10 agencies!

Recipient Agency
The Radical Hale

Radical Hale is a small nonprofit working to provide outreach, health care, medical, and housing navigation services to the houseless.

Founded after the pandemic by Executive Director Kara England, the nonprofit is run solely by Kara and her volunteers without assistance from large government grants or financial donors. Kara reached out to Aloha Harvest hoping to build a steady partnership to provide food for the houseless. We are thrilled to support and expand her outreach, delivering food donations to her distributions twice a month.

Kara pours her heart into the organization’s operations and reminds us that the houseless are people in our community who need just as much love and care as if they were our own family members.

Bottom right: Sodexo maintains clear signage throughout their kitchen to ensure food safety and quality protocols are maintained.

Team Announcements

The Rockefeller Foundation – Acumen Food Systems Fellowship

We are excited to share that our very own executive director, Phil Acosta, has been chosen as a member of the inaugural cohort of The Rockefeller Foundation – Acumen Food Systems Fellowship! There were over 1,000 applicants, and Phil will be one of 22 global leaders working on creative solutions for transformative food systems change.

The fellowship is an intensive, one-year leadership development program offered through Acumen Academy, the world’s school for social change. The inaugural Food Systems Fellowship will introduce moral leadership concepts to a globally diverse cohort of food systems leaders who are creating more inclusive, nourishing, and regenerative food systems.

Fellows will participate in a blend of immersive seminars, workshops, and self-directed leadership experiments. The program will combine in-person and virtual learning over the course of the Fellowship year. After Year 1 of the Fellowship, Food Systems Fellows will join Acumen’s global community of social innovators, called The Foundry, who are working together to build a world without poverty and injustice.

AFF is providing support with our capacity building efforts to develop the workforce that will support our future Food Resilience Hub, expanding organizational capacity to work with more partners and serve more people.

AUW is providing multiyear support through their Safety Net program, allowing us to continue to provide critical food assistance to our keiki, kupuna, individuals, and families who are resource-constrained.

Support from the Cooke Foundation will allow us to expand our Meals with Aloha program, which feeds families through a unique aggregation of rescued food and purchased ingredients in collaboration with established community partners to prepare/package meals, create value-add products, and assist with outreach and distribution.

Ongoing financial support from the Aranoff Keiki Fund and Kipuka Fund, through HCF, allows us to scale the impact of our mission to rescue quality food to nourish and strengthen the community. The Foundation is also providing support for our Emergency Planning and Disaster Preparedness efforts.
